This octagonal limestone tower was erected in 1865. In 1915, due to the sale of Spring Grove, it moved from Christ Episcopal Church to Spring Grove. This is possibly the tallest octagonal structure in the United States. The Avenue Railroad was also built by James Keys Wilson in 1863. The east addition was later added, and the west side was designed by Fritz Gerke.

General William H. Lytle monument

STOP 1 - McAlpin monument

Born in 1836 in rural Kentucky, when he was a young boy, Henry McAlpin was captured and sold into slavery. He escaped and joined the Union army, where he rose to the rank of major general before being mustered out with a permanent disability. He then worked as a teacher and politician in Kentucky until his death in 1901.

This is where women show entrance tickets to prove that they had relatives buried in the cemetery. This monument is dedicated to the memory of those women.

STOP 2 - Salmon P. Chase

Chase was the first justice of the Supreme Court to die in the field of battle. He was later buried here.

This is the grave of one of the first American women sculptors. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 3 - Robert Gould Shaw

This monument is dedicated to the memory of Robert Gould Shaw, a Union military officer and abolitionist. He was born in 1837 in Massachusetts and died in 1863 during the American Civil War. He was the first African American officer in the Union army and led the 54th Massachusetts Regiment, which was composed of African American soldiers. He is best known for his role in the Battle of Fort Wagner in Charleston, South Carolina, where he and his men were the first African American soldiers to fight in a battle.

STOP 4 - Dearborn House & Garden Mausoleum

This is the grave of one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 5 - General William H. Lytle monument

STOP 6 - Soldier's Monument

This monument is dedicated to the memory of those who died fighting for the Union. It was completed in 1886 and is one of several shelter houses built by Elzner & Company. The monument was modeled after the Soldier's Monument in Washington, D.C.

STOP 7 - McAlpin monument

Born in 1836 in rural Kentucky, when he was a young boy, Henry McAlpin was captured and sold into slavery. He escaped and joined the Union army, where he rose to the rank of major general before being mustered out with a permanent disability. He then worked as a teacher and politician in Kentucky until his death in 1901.

STOP 8 - Saint Anthony's domesticated by Samuel 27

This octagonal limestone tower was erected in 1865. In 1915, due to the sale of Spring Grove, it moved from Christ Episcopal Church to Spring Grove. This is possibly the tallest octagonal structure in the United States. The Avenue Railroad was also built by James Keys Wilson in 1863. The east addition was later added, and the west side was designed by Fritz Gerke.

STOP 1 - McAlpin monument

Born in 1836 in rural Kentucky, when he was a young boy, Henry McAlpin was captured and sold into slavery. He escaped and joined the Union army, where he rose to the rank of major general before being mustered out with a permanent disability. He then worked as a teacher and politician in Kentucky until his death in 1901.

This is where women show entrance tickets to prove that they had relatives buried in the cemetery. This monument is dedicated to the memory of those women.

STOP 2 - Salmon P. Chase

Chase was the first justice of the Supreme Court to die in the field of battle. He was later buried here.

This is the grave of one of the first American women sculptors. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 3 - Robert Gould Shaw

This monument is dedicated to the memory of Robert Gould Shaw, a Union military officer and abolitionist. He was born in 1837 in Massachusetts and died in 1863 during the American Civil War. He was the first African American officer in the Union army and led the 54th Massachusetts Regiment, which was composed of African American soldiers. He is best known for his role in the Battle of Fort Wagner in Charleston, South Carolina, where he and his men were the first African American soldiers to fight in a battle.

STOP 4 - Dearborn House & Garden Mausoleum

This is the grave of one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 5 - General William H. Lytle monument

STOP 6 - Soldier's Monument

This monument is dedicated to the memory of those who died fighting for the Union. It was completed in 1886 and is one of several shelter houses built by Elzner & Company. The monument was modeled after the Soldier's Monument in Washington, D.C.

STOP 7 - McAlpin monument

Born in 1836 in rural Kentucky, when he was a young boy, Henry McAlpin was captured and sold into slavery. He escaped and joined the Union army, where he rose to the rank of major general before being mustered out with a permanent disability. He then worked as a teacher and politician in Kentucky until his death in 1901.

This is where women show entrance tickets to prove that they had relatives buried in the cemetery. This monument is dedicated to the memory of those women.

STOP 2 - Salmon P. Chase

Chase was the first justice of the Supreme Court to die in the field of battle. He was later buried here.

This is the grave of one of the first American women sculptors. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 3 - Robert Gould Shaw

This monument is dedicated to the memory of Robert Gould Shaw, a Union military officer and abolitionist. He was born in 1837 in Massachusetts and died in 1863 during the American Civil War. He was the first African American officer in the Union army and led the 54th Massachusetts Regiment, which was composed of African American soldiers. He is best known for his role in the Battle of Fort Wagner in Charleston, South Carolina, where he and his men were the first African American soldiers to fight in a battle.

STOP 4 - Dearborn House & Garden Mausoleum

This is the grave of one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.

STOP 5 - General William H. Lytle monument

STOP 6 - Soldier's Monument

This monument is dedicated to the memory of those who died fighting for the Union. It was completed in 1886 and is one of several shelter houses built by Elzner & Company. The monument was modeled after the Soldier's Monument in Washington, D.C.

STOP 7 - McAlpin monument

Born in 1836 in rural Kentucky, when he was a young boy, Henry McAlpin was captured and sold into slavery. He escaped and joined the Union army, where he rose to the rank of major general before being mustered out with a permanent disability. He then worked as a teacher and politician in Kentucky until his death in 1901.

This is where women show entrance tickets to prove that they had relatives buried in the cemetery. This monument is dedicated to the memory of those women.

STOP 2 - Salmon P. Chase

Chase was the first justice of the Supreme Court to die in the field of battle. He was later buried here.

This is the grave of one of the first American women sculptors. She was born in 1866 in Kentucky and was one of the first female sculptors in the United States. She was responsible for designing the military statue at the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery. Her work was inspired by the military statues of France, Germany, and Bavaria. She was the first woman in the United States to design a statue for a public building.